

Oenothera fruticosa

Sundrops

Sundrops is a day-flowering member of the evening primrose family. Red buds turn into yellow flowers over a long period. It prefers moderately fertile, dry, well-drained soil in full sun but will tolerate some shade. Good winter drainage is essential. It can spread quickly forming a semi-evergreen groundcover. Deer will eat flowers.

Wildlife Value: Hummingbirds nectar at the flowers and songbirds eat the seeds. Supports specialized bee Lasioglossum oenotherae.
