

Phlox subulata

Moss Phlox

Local eco-type, straight species.

Also known as “Carpet Phlox” for the way the flowers completely cover the foliage when in full bloom in April. The straight species tends to be pale pink to pale lavender. Semi-evergreen needle-like foliage will spread gradually, reaching 1-3ft, particularly on a hill or hanging over a wall.

Deer resistant.

Wildlife Value: Flowers attract hummingbirds, butterflies, skippers, and bees.
